Will aid formula change?

State Rep. James Miceli has joined with House Majority Leader George Keverian of Everett in an effort to adopt a fair distribution formula for the $265 million in new state aid for the 351 communities in the Commonwealth. The aid is part of the 22-day overdue fiscal 1982 state budget signed by Governor Edward King Tuesday afternoon. When King signed the $6.35 billion spending plan he did so without changing the local aid figure or the formula used to distribute it.

Without a change, the largest chunk of money will be distributed under the "lottery formula". Under the "lottery formula" the additional aid distributed to Wilmington will cover about 17 percent of the town's loss from 2½. Miceli said the total distribution package, which includes using the school transportation reimbursement formula among others, will send $421,517 in new state aid to Wilmington. Other communities in the Commonwealth will gain 100 percent or more of their 2½ lose under the "lottery formula".

"It's better than nothing. I'm glad to get it," said Wilmington Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski, who did say that he would have liked to have received more.

"That formula is a flukey thing. The more I think of it, the more I wish it was skewed in our favor," Stapczynski said.

The bill which Miceli is co-sponsoring with Keverian will "cap" the percentage sent back to the cities and towns at "no less than 40 percent and no more than 60 percent" of their 2½ lose, Miceli said. If the bill is approved by the legislature there is a "chance of picking up additional aid" for Wilmington, Miceli said.

Miceli said the bill is getting some support from the House leadership. He cited the fact that Keverian's home town of Everett is picking up only 17 percent of their 2½ lose. Burlington, home of the Chairman for the Committee on Local Affairs Robert Vigneau, will only pick up 15 percent of their total loss. Similar figures hold true for the homes of other House leaders as well.

Miceli explained that the "lottery formula" is based on the wealth of the community. It is figured by taking the state equalized valuation setting and adding to that the average statewide population figure. That is put over the sum of the local equalized valuation setting and local population figure. The result is then multiplied by $10 to come out with the amount of aid distributed under the "lottery formula".

With that process, Miceli said, the towns that are worth more get less aid and the towns that are worth less get more aid. But the figures will bend the truth a little. If a community is loaded with industry it will appear to be worth more. Likewise, if a community has a very high population figure it will tilt the scales to one side.

Those are the reasons, along with the fact that the loses from 2½ are no addressed, that Richard Manley of the Mass. Taxpayer's Foundation (MTF) said the "lottery formula" is like "throwing dice."

Miceli said he supported the formula that the MTF proposed. That formula would have been based on per capita income and the number of people in the community. Miceli said the MTF plan is a "fairer way to do it." But the "lottery formula" is what the conference committee decided would be best.

The conference committee, comprised of two Democrats and one Republican from each chamber, was appointed when an impasse in the state budget was reached. They were charged with coming up with a budget proposal that both chambers could agree with.

Miceli said that when the conference committee sends a proposal back to the General Court it "can't be amended." The only thing the legislators can do is vote yes or no on the conerence committee proposal.

It was the conference committee's proposal which finally won approval from both chambers and was sent on the governor.

Miceli said he had hoped the governor would send the distribution formula back to the legislature for more work. But since King has not recommended a change in the distribution formula Miceli said he "might have to take the legislative approach" to changing it.

Wilmington gets $421,517

by Debbi Michals

The word from Rep. James Miceli is that Wilmington can expect $421,517 in state aid to cities and towns. That figure is $36,659 less than the $458,176 that Miceli originally told Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski he expected.

The reason for the shift is that Boston was allowed to use its 1975 census figures in computing the budget, Miceli said. That reduced the aid going to every city and town in the state except, of course, Boston, where aid increased, he added.

The formula for determining how much state aid cities and towns will receive is a pretty basic one, said Miceli, but combinations of it are always subject to change. Each year around budget time, a conference committee, composed of three members chosen by the House and three members chosen from the Senate, is formed. Two of the thre emembers that each legislativ ebody chooses must be Democrats and the other one must be a Republican. The conference committee then decides which combination of the formula they would like to use in determining the state aid, Miceli said.

The formulas very from te lottery formula to the per capita formula to the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation formula. Miceli said he supported this last one because it provided the communities that he represents with a bit more aid.

The formula being used this year, Miceli said, is a combination of the lottery formula plus school transportation plus the increase in 766 placements, which gave Wilmington an additional $17,000.

He said that there is a danger in changing the formula at this point because it could result in less aid than most towns are expecting. He added, however, that there is a movement afoot in the House to try to change the distribution formula so that towns receiving more than 100 percent of their total budget in state aid will receive less, and towns that are expected to get a good deal less than their budget will receive more. This way the money will be spread out more evenly, he said. Although he's not making any promises, Miceli explained that if the distribution formula is changed, it could mean additional aid for Wilmington, which is currently expected to receive 17 percent of its total budget.

He said that none of the towns he represents was dissatisfied with the aid that they are expected to receive. He said that neither he nor Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski have heard any complaints at all. "The towns were basically satisfied with what they are getting when compared with the Lowells and Bostons," he added.

Currently, Miceli said, there is a piece of legislation in the budget which would form an advisory board to enable cities and towns to decide what will be spent. It will also eliminate representatives from other counties from voting on a given county's budget. He went on to say that this way most of county government could be done away with, and local governments could show just how fiscally conservative they are going to be. "Now they'll have complete control of their budget," he added, which could save some communities thousands of dollars.

Originally most cities and towns weren't interested in this proposal, Miceli explained, but now with Proposition 2½, more communities are looking to adopt it. "This to me is an outstanding piece of legislation," he said. "It could mean tremendous savings to cities and towns in Middlesex County."

Church Street accident

Two drivers sustained minor injuries in a head-on collision on Church Street in Wilmington, near the Walker School on Monday afternoon. The drivers were Dorothea McManus of North Reading and Nancy St. Pierre of Haverhill.

Dukakis outlines strategies

Former Governor Michael Dukakis met a warm, if soggy reception at the Shawsheen Avenue home of Mike and Patricia Nash Monday night.

Scores of supporters waited out a two hour downpour under the protection of a striped canvas canopy to hear the Democratic challenger outline his strategies and make an early pitch in the 1982 gubernatorial campaign.

Dukakis, who lost his first re-election bid to Governor Ed King in 1978, told the crowd he had learned from the mistakes of his last campaign.

"I take full responsiblity, (for the loss)," he said. "But this time we're going to run a strong, aggressive campaign. We plan to organize the state in a grass roots way."

It would, he said, be an expensive campaign, but Dukakis said he was already encouraged by the response he has been getting from people across the state.

"As of June 30, he quipped, "Dukakis had more money in the bank than King."

Several in the crowd could be overheard agreeing that the 1982 campaign was already different from the 1978 one. "He was always a good governor, but not always necessarily a good politician," commented Wilmington attorney Joseph Courtney. "Now I see signs that he can be both."

Dukakis indicated that complacency would have no part in this campaign. Opinion polls that have labelled him the frontrunner so far were dubbed "interesting" but "meaningless" by the former governor.

"They tell us we have a governor in very bad trouble, but they tell us nothing else," he said. "There are literally thousands of people fed up with what's been going on in the state house and who are prepared to work for change."

Change may not necessarily mean Dukakis, however. In addition to Dukakis and King, Lt. Gov. Tom O'Neill, son of House Speaker Tip O'Neill, has also thrown his hat in the ring and has received the support of Congressman James Shannon.

Another wild card that may yet be played is an entry into the contest, some feel at the last moment by Attorney General Francis Bellotti.

This year, because of a new method of selecting convention delegates by caucases in individual cities and towns, the Dukakis organization is concentrating much of its attention on the first Saturday in February 1982, when slates of delegates for the May convention will be chosen by ballot. Only voters who are registered in the Democratic Party by December 1, 1981, will be eligible to participate in the caucases for the selection of delegates.

"What happens at the convention in May will be largely determined by the caucases," Dukakis said. "We'll need to turn out people by the thousands on caucas day."

Among the issues brought up by Dukakis were King's failure to keep his commitment to provide 60 percent more local aid to cities and towns, his neglect of the MBTA, and his failure to "even begin to cope" with Proposition 2½.

Tech makes adjustments

News release prepared by Shawsheen Tech

Those in education are faced with making many adjustments due to the advent of Proposition 2½ and the subsequent budget cuts that are required.

Shawsheen Tech has taken the new situation in stride by making adjustments in its operation. In order to utilize the facilities during the day as much as possible, an increased number of students will be admitted, particularly those who were formerly in the special afternoon program but will now be added to the regular day school enrollment.

Superintendent - Director Wolk has always felt that although the state is tops in the country in skill training on a secondary level, we are far behind other states in making opportunities available for adults. Because of the budget limits, Wolk felt that this would be an excellent chance to train adults since both the summertime and afternoons - the equipment would be available for skill training.

As a result and through the initiative of John McDermott, area coordinator, four programs have been introduced that will make it possible for adults to acquire skills and permit teachers who have been dropped because of fewer students in their respective systems, as well as due to budget limitations under Proposition 2½, have a chance to be trained as computer operators or programmers. The programs in operation or shortly to begin are as follows:

"Project Summer" is a two-fold program being offered to adults at Shawsheen district five days a week, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. June 29 through August 14, training participants in Word Processing and Data Processing.

"Project P.A.T." (Placement, Assessment Training) is an eight week program five days a week from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. July 6 through August 28, designed to train unemployed adults in office practices.

"Project C.A.P." (Computer Application Program) is a six month COBOL programmers training program designed to retrain teachers and municipal employees. Tentative starting date is August 3 and it will run through the end of January.

Wolk also has proposed to the School Committee two programs where employment opportunities are excellent; these are in the field of machine shop and electronics. The School Committee is going to review his proposal at the next meeting which will take place August 14.

The programs that have so far been initiated under the supervision of Mr. McDermott, as a result of grants received from the state and Federal governments have been self-supporting.

The two adult programs suggested by Wolk are expected to be self-supporting in that adults will pay weekly as they progress in their respective areas. This is a unique education training experience and it is hoped that this opportunity will be forthcoming in order to see how successful this new trend will emerge.

SERVICES COVERED BY DENTAL INSURANCE

Today, some 70 million (3 out of every 10 Americans) are covered by some form of dental insurance and estimates are that coverage could increase to 95 million within five years. Individual companies and labor unions are responsible for most of this increase.

If you have dental insurance, you may wonder what dental services are covered. Although all plans are not the same, most cover a wide range of services both for the employee and his family.

These services generally include examinations, x-rays, professional cleaning, fillings, crowns and other restorations, root canal treatment, extractions, other oral surgery, and peridontal treatment (for diseases of gums and bone supporting the teeth). . .

Additionally, some plans cover dentures, fixed and removable bridges, and orthodontic care.

Dental insurance programs do not usually cover hospitalization costs involved in treatment. However, hospital care may be covered by your medical insurance. Also, nearly every program excludes the cost of dental treatment provided for purely cosmetic reasons.

A public service to promote beter dental health.

Dr. Carol Sager

'I really felt that education needed me'

by Debbi Michals

"I think it's the competence of an individual that people look for," said Wilmington Assistant Superintendent of Schools Dr. Carol Sager.

Dr. Sager, who began her studies at Barnard College with a major in Russian, became specifically interested in education when her daughter began to read at an early age. "They told me I had ruined her education," she smiled. "She's now in her fourth year of medical school."

It was at that point, Dr. Sager said, that "I really felt education needed me." She advanced in her studies to obtain both a master's degree and a doctorate in education.

Currently beginning her 10th year in the Wilmington school system, she was recently named acting superintendent upon the departure of Dr. Walter Pierce. She had been reading director for eight years and assistant superintendent for one year. Her duties now as acting superintendent include all functions of the assistant superintendent, superintendent, and reading director. "What I'm doing now is handling all the tasks that have to be done," she said. "Obviously some will hav to be delegated."

She said that the problems of sexual discrimination never crossed her mind as she began her career in education. "My mother was a pharmacist, which was rare for a woman at that time," she explained, "so I was never aware that women weren't supposed to contribute as much as they could." She cited her experience at Barnard College, an all-girl school, as another reason why she has never held back in pursuit of her career. At this college, she said, women could be seen in all positions and roles, so it was never considered that it was unnatural for them to do so.

One of Dr. Sager's major concerns at this time has been the Basic Skills Improvement Program. This program, which was implemented by all school systems as mandated by a new state law, requires that all students in grades three, six and eight be tested for minimum competency in reading, writing, and math. The purpose of the Basic Skills Improvement Program is to be sure that all students gain competence in basic skills prior to high school graduation. If they do not achieve minimum standards, she said, curriculum and instruction will be altered through the regular school program to help insure that minimum standards will be reached in the future.

"Education really begins and ends in the classroom with the programs that we provide for our students," she said, stressing the importance of curriculum. "What we as a total community need to do is to help students become aware of what they are doing in the classroom and how it affects what they will be doing for the rest of their lives," she added.

To do this, Sager has enlisted the help of all segments of the community to participate in Basic Skills Week, which will be from September 20 to 26. "Since a well educated populus is to the benefit of everyone, then everyone should realize that good education is the responsibility of everybody," she said. "Education must be seen not as a rival or competitive concern, but as an integral concern of all citizens." She added that parents advisory committees have been formed to handle the issues around the Basic Skills program.

September 24, she said, has been named Basic Skills Awareness Day. So far 25 local individuals and businesses plan to be present on this day to show graphically the importance of basic skills that are taught in school and their place in the working world. She said that there has been an upswing in economic growth which has been accompanied by a shortage of skilled labor. She went on to say that both parents and businesses have complained to school administrators everywhere saying that the schools are graduating students who can't even follow basic directions in filling out a simple job application. She said that by working together as a community, these problems can be solved. After all, she added, education is the concern of every employer who is looking for a skilled employee, of every citizen who depends on an intelligent legislature to make responsible decisions on social security or medicare, and of every community that wants to have an effective and adequate form of local government.

The results of the basic skills exams were very impressive with the majority of students attaining minimum competency or better. "We have done very well," Sager said, "but that doesn't mean we're satisfied because we won't be satisfied until every child has reached his fullpotential." She added that minimum competency is important, but that helping every child go beyond that to achieve his full potential is also a major issue.

Among her other priorities as acting superintendent, Sager said, "is to preserve the excellence of our program by using existing resources as creatively as possible. My major concern is to see if we can procure additional funds to lower class size at the elementary level. There is no way a teacher can provide as effective instruction for 30 children as she can for say 20-25." Some people reply to that statement saying that there were 30 kids in a class when they were in school and they did just fine, Dr. Sager said, "but this is the 1980s and education for a child in the 1980s is very different. There are very different demands placed on them than say in the 1940s and 1950s ... Our children will not live in Wilmington all their lives, and they will have to be able to compete with children in other communities." She added that the average class size at the elementary level is somewhere between 29 and 32 students, with four classes at 32 students, 11 classes at 31 students, 11 classes at 30 students, five classes at 29 students, and two classes at 25 students.

Dr. Sager said that she has been very happy working in Wilmington. She went on to say that she has found her work very rewarding. As reading director, her Title One program was validated as exemplary by the Massachusetts State Department of Education. The reading program received national recognition, and she is very proud to have been able to bring federal money into the system in order to purchase additional computers for students to learn to use.

The Wilmington school system has grown quite a bit in the last 10 years. She feels that "Wilmington is a desirable community to live in because of its schools." She said that the people in this town have been very supportive of education and added, "I don't feel that I would have been able to accomplish as much if they had not been supportive of education. We have a fine school system, certainly there are improvements to be made, but the people in this community care about children."

Trio wins bronze medal

The regional competition, which was held at the West Springfield High School, consisted of contestants from the six New England states and New York.

They were awarded an Olympic style bronze medal for their achievement. It was their first competition and they were judged in variety, difficulty, gracefulness, execution of their routine, precision and showmanship.

The trio are all members of Linda Lanni's Rangerettes, a local parade group that has been seen throughout Massachusetts in many parades. They have also performed in area shows and at the New England Rehabilitation Center to the delight of many patients and visitors. They are all students of Linda Lanni's School of Baton and Modeling.

Colleen and Margie are both students at St. Charles Elementary School in Woburn. Kristen will be entering grade five at the Wildwood School in Wilmington. She is the daughter of Bruce and Thelma Peters.

Solved: The riddle of the Pearson Tavern

Dear Larz:

The riddle of Pearson Tavern has finally been solved! The reason a definite building date could never be applied to the Pearson Tavern up on Salem Street is because the assumption that it was built by Kendall Pearson, perhaps in 1738, simply was untrue and has been a misleading factor in all subsequent research.

Material proof of interest to substantially change the historical picture of this old home has recently been discovered. However, let me hasten to assure you that the name "Pearson Tavern" can still be aptly applied although the building did not come into the hands of the Pearson family until 1830 - nearly 100 years later than previously reported. At this time the house was less than 30 years old and was purchased "at auction" by Aaron Pearson Jr., the son of Major Aaron Pearson. Therefore, Deacon Kendall Pearson, his son, Nathan, and his grandson Major Aaron Pearson never lived in this house.

The house is actually part of the "homestead farm" of Samuel Eames Jr.. Samuel purchased it in 1815 from his father, Samuel Eames Esq.. The land upon which the house stands was acquired by Squire Eames in 1803 from Dr. Jabez Brown for $250.00. It contained five and one-half acres and was described in the deed as "tillage." Upon this land the Samuel Eames Jr. Homestead, later called "Pearson Tavern," was built, possibly in 1804 or 1805.

The 1815 sale of the property by Samuel Eames Esq. to his son, Samuel Jr., referred to above, included 30 acres. A 20 acre lot had been purchased on April 16, 1795 from Abraham Stanley, yeoman. It was located northwest of the Boston Road to Andover and bound on the south by land of Asa Holt, on the east by Col. Joshua Harnden, and on the north and west by the land of Aaron Pearson. It was purchased for use as a grazing field with a privilege included in the deed for passing over the land of Asa Holt with cattle from the Boston Andover Road.

On July 2, 1799 Asa Holt agreed to sell four and one-half acres of pasture to Samuel at the west end of his farm. This lot was meant to provide access to the 20 acres that Samuel already owned. It is described as bound on the south by the Boston Road and on the west by land of Dr. Jabez Brown. Both deeds were recorded on July 8, 1806.

This 30 acre homestead farm belonging to Samuel Eames Jr., is described as being located "bound on the Boston Road to Haverhill" and "the road that runs by Aaron Pearson's house." The later road, now known as Ballardvale Street, was the location of the home of Ens. Nathan Pearson and his son, Aaron Pearson Sr. called Major Aaron Pearson during the War of 1812. The house stood at the foot of Lockwood Road and burned down about 1905. It was for a time the home of the mother of John Simpson, Wilmington's last surviving veteran of the Civil War.

Squire Samuel Eames had only two children of his own, a daughter, Thirsa, and Samuel Jr. Samuel married Esther Harnden in February 1778, when he was 23 years old. She, at 37, was a widow with five children. Her maiden name was Esther Pierce and she was the wife of Joseph Harnden from 1759 until his death in December 1775.

Both young Samuel and his sister, Thirsa, were married at about the same time. Samuel went out to Lunenburg where in 1800 he and his wife, Dolly had their first child, also named Samuel. The young couple evidently returned to Wilmington soon after as a second child, Dolly, was born here in 1802. Subsequent children were born locally. It is probable that Samuel and Dolly moved in with Squire Eames and Esther for a time. The Squire's Homestead stood for many years down on Middlesex Avenue on the site of the new Reading Cooperative Bank. With a growing family to consider it was soon obvious that the couple needed a place of their own. So it was that Squire Eames financed the purchase of the Jabez Brown lot and assisted in the building of a home for his only son.

Samuel Jr. and Dolly had eight children. A second son, John, born in 1804, died young.

On February 25, 1815, Samuel Eames Jr. purchased one and one-half acres of meadow between the Boston Road and the Salem to New Hampshire Road, which became known as the Lowell Road during the 1820's after the City of Lowell was established. This "meadow lot" just to the east of Samuel's home, was purchased from Asa Holt. Until this time Squire Eames held all the deeds to his son's property. Now he decided to sell his three lot purchases to young Samuel. The 30 acre farm with a dwelling house, barn and shed was sold to Samuel Jr. for $1,250.00 on March 10, 1815.

Less than two weeks after signing the papers which deeded them their homestead Dolly died suddenly, probably in childbirth. She was only 34 years old at the time and left seven children ranging in age from two to 15 years.

The following year, on February 14, 1816, Samuel Eames Jr. married Abigail Jones of Andover and there were two more children - Abigail in 1817, and Sylvester in 1819. The boy was probably named after Sylvester Holt, son of Asa, who lived on the next farm to the north on Andover Street.

Samuel Eames Jr. died in 1829 at the age of 49, but Abigail lived to be 70. She retained a "widoe's third" in Samuel's estate. Where she lived is unknown. She died in 1848.

When Aaron Pearson Jr. married Dolly, the oldest daughter of Samuel Jr., it was September, 1821. They lived first in the Pearson House on Ballardvale Road. Then, after his father-in-law died in 1928, Aaron rented the Samuel Eames Jr. Homestead and converted it for use as a "Tavern" or stop-over for drovers and others on the way from Salem to the new city of Lowell. Aaron Pearson soon purchased the property at auction and ran his "public house" from 1830 until about 1850 when the railroad constructed between these cities made travel both easier and faster.

Aaron Pearson Jr. and Dolly had seven children. The oldest, Louisa, was born April 20, 1823. She married Levi Swain Jr. in November 1846 and after her father's death in 1853 the house became hers. Levi and Louisa were married 66 years and had six children.

Levi was a disabled veteran of the Civil War having participated in the "Seige of Port Hudson" in 1863. He served as Town Constable before Wilmington had a police department.

One of the daughters of Levi and Louisa Swain was Anna Louisa who married John H. Simpson. the Swains and the Simpsons shared the "Pearson Tavern," which was a duplex for many years, until Anna died about 1910. At this time another daughter, Clara and her husband Herbert E. Nichols of Reading took up residence there.

Another daughter, Angelina, married George Gowing in 1850. This couple built the impressive mansion on Andover Street which is now the home of the family of the late Rev. Rudolph Krey, a little north-east of the "Tavern."

George, who was superintendent of the local Sunday School, and his wife were very fond of skating. As the story has been told, one Sunday afternoon in January, 1863, the young couple was out on nearby Nod Pond when Angelina fell through a break in the ice. George went into the water after his wife in an attempt to save her life. However, his skates became entangled in her hoop-skirts and both drowned, leaving four children, the youngest only two years old.

So, "Pearson Tavern" is an interesting and historic old house and does have a story to tell, although not exactly the one with which it has been credited in the past.!

I hope this letter is helpful. If you have any questions about the material, please contact me, anytime.

Yours for an accurate

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

Last week's edition of the Town Crier was the most pleasant bit of reading I've had in a long time.

I was filled with a natural 'high' of hopefulness regarding the future of our town.

My faith in our town leaders is beginning to be restored and I'm almost afraid to read the paper that this letter will appear in.

I was delighted to hear that the Harnden Tavern apartment will be rented to the couple who are so interested in history. It seems such a perfect for the town and the couple.

The possibility that the Mildred Rogers School could be turned into a cultural center by the Spotlighters left visions of drama lessons for children as well as the chance for creative writing, art and even craft opportunities. This society places such a high priority on tv and gives so much prestige to actors. I feel that this kind of program could inspire confidence in our children as well as a pride in their community.

And most of all, the $458,176 that we will receive from state aid is more than expected. This provides the hope that our schools will not suffer as greatly as had been anticipated.

Maybe we can't go back to the ideal of 20 children to a class, but if children have more people to work with them and exciting programs to challenge them, the effects of the larger class sizes may be alleviated.

With enough support for teachers, they may still be able to provide a kind and gentle atmosphere for our little people.

Thank you,
Elaine Tucker

Well, Carter's mad because he lost,
Now look how much his peanuts cost.
To stop inflation I've a plan,
I say we buy more from Japan,
Or borrow money from Iran.
Miss Piggy's now a movie star,
Whose sex appeal is quite bizarre.
Two bucks a gallon can't be far.
Chrysler's got the K-car.
Who shot J.R.?
For lent I gave up caviar.
The Beatles now are incomplete.
Columbia was quite a feat.
O'Connor's now your honor.
Who says ERA's a goner?
Reagan's chewing jelly beans.
Charles is busy picking queens.
Cronkite's left our T.V. screens,
To advertise designer jeans.
Is Preppie out or is he in?
These hunger strikes are wearing thin.
The gypsy moth's have eaten their fill,
Now if they'd just pay the bill.
I hear Reagan's hair is grey.

County reform came with budget

News release prepared by Rep. James Miceli

In a move which has escaped notice amid loud sighs of relief from state employees, welfare recipients and impatient citizens, both branches of the Massachusetts Legislature have given their final approval to a revolutionary change in county budgeting procedures, and sent the change on to the Governor as an "outside section" of the final state budget.

The provision bars the Legislature entirely from the process of approving county government spending. Control is instead lodged in county budget boards comprised entirely of selectmen, mayors an dother elected officials from the cities and towns within each county.

"The Governor's approval of the state budget will represent the signing of a declaration of independence for Massachusetts counties," said Rep. James Miceli, a member of the Middlesex County Project, a coalition of legislators who have worked for reform. "Until now the counties have been colonial possessions of the state Legislature. This section of the state budget sets them free, and permits them to be operated by the local communities who make them up.

The final obstacle in the way f the reform is the threat of gubernatorial veto. "We know the Governor is considering vetoes from outside sections," Rep. Miceli says, "but we haven't heard that the county reforms are in trouble. We're hoping that no news means good news."

Middlesex County Project members point out that each city and town has to pay an assessment for county services with the same property tax dollars which could otherwise go for police protection, fire protection or public education. They maintain that since cities and towns carry the costs of county government, they should also be able to determine the size of the budget.

"This doesn't mean that cities and towns can go to sleep on the issue of county waste and spending," Rep. Miceli says. "The county budget boards created by the new reforms will have to start meeting this fall, and the mayors and selectmen should begin to organize now. Getting the Legislature out of the counties amounts to a revolution, but the usual aftermath of revolution is chaos. Chaos will happen here if the cities and towns don't get on the backs of their county governments right from the start."

Rep. Miceli said that cities and towns in places such as Middlesex County can, if they wish to, come close to "abolishing" their county governments through the use of the new budget authority. The law does not require that they appropriate money for a function or department they believe is unnecessary. The county operations which remain will be those which can demonstrate their value to the city and town officials on the newly constituted county budget board.

The cities and towns will also have the option of using their budgetary powers to make county government serve new and useful regional purposes. "This is a chance to save the taxpayer some money," said Miceli, "but it's also the chance to experiment a bit."

Yukon music; Sheerin cuts album

A former Wilmington man has achieved a degree of success in the music world, albeit in a cold, remote part of the world.

Scott Sheerin has cut his first record album. The title, "Midnight Light" gives some hint as to where Scott is now living — Dawson City, in the Yukon, the northermost town in the territory.

The album is billed as "contemporary music from the Yukon." It features John Steins on guitar and Sheerin on flute and sax. A half dozen other musicians also contributed to the album, including Sheerin's wife Carleen.

One song from the album, "Ice Crystals," has been used in a French documentary film on the Yukon. Steins and Sheerin collaborated writing the song.

The album is now in its second pressing, but is available only in Canada, with the exception of a few copies which his parents, Warren and Evelyn Sheerin, have been selling to friends.

The music could be described as something between bluegrass, jazz, ragtime and Indian music, strictly instrumental. Some of the music was written by Steins alone, some with Sheerin.

Scott moved to the Yukon about a year ago. He had grown up in Wilmington, graduating fron Wilmington High School in 1971. Sheerin's mother credits former WHS music teacher Al Graceffa with having given him the necessary push to become a musician.

Since moving to the Yukon, Scott has married a Canadian woman, Carleen Amos, and has been supporting himself as a musician. He recently performed in concert on an Indian reservation at Yellow Knife. Much of his work takes place in the taverns of Dawson City, a gold-mining town.

Because of Canadian immigration laws, he has not been able to work other than as a musician, although he has just received clearance to work as a carpenter. Such clearance is not easily granted. And once it had been issued by the Canadian consul in Boston, his mother had to send him the papers, without the aid of the Canadian postal system, which is on strike. The papers were sent to Eagle, Alaska, and Scott went there to get them. He had to hitchike from Dawson City to Eagle, and then camp outside the post office for three days.

Community Schools holds workshop

The Board of Directors of the Wilmington Community Schools held its third of 10 training workshop sessions Thursday evening at the Regional Health Center. The training project is conducted by Dr. Daniel J. Willis of the Cooperative Extension Service, University of Mass. at Amherst.

The evening's agenda, "Goal Setting and Planning Process," included (a) identification of problem(s); (b) the defining long-range goals and objectives; and (c) choosing and priortizing one year objectives.

Five goals were selected by the nine board members present: (1) Program Plan; (2) Define a Common Identity; (3) Operational Plan; (4) Increase Financial Base; and (5) Have Fun.

The president of the Wilmington Community Schools, Inc., Gabriel Muraca, said that Dr. Willis is not bringing answers, but a process; in three sessions he has done well in facilitating us to look at ourselves in order to grow and expand. Board member Adele Passmore, spoke of her enjoying the brainstorming session for "How to Make Things Different in One Year:" "None of us," Mrs. Passmore said, "had to give value judgements nor analyze another's idea. We are on a new road for determining strategies and time-line tasks."

Other board members present were Lawrence Doucette, Cathy Murphy, Carroll Robbins, Beverly Shea, Charlotte Stewart, Gail Vozzella and Paul McDonald, coordinator of Wilmington Community Schools.

Board of Appeals decisions

The Wilmington Board of Appeals has granted permission for Rocco's Restaurant to build a small take-out stand near the restaurant. Restaurant owner Rocco DePasquale said that the building will be used for the sale of ice cream, but that he also sought permission for it be used for pizza and take-out items.

Rocco had previously received permission to build an addition to the restaurant, which will provide a new kitchen facility and storage area for the business. Construction on the addition is expected to take place this year. The take-out stand, though, will be built in 1982.

The Board of Appeals has also voted unanimously to allow Michael A. Howland to provide less than the required number of parking spaces for the one-story multi-tenant industrial building he proposes to construct on Lopez Road. Howland indicated that he plans to provide 263 parking spaces, 76 spaces less than the minimum requirement under the zoning bylaw. According to Howland, no more than 75-100 parking spaces are actually required to carry on business in such a complex during the course of a day. The requst was consistent with previous variances granted by the Board of Appeals.

The board voted in an official map case to grant Richard W. Proctor a permit to build a single family dwelling on his Melrose Road property with the condition that he construct a finished roadway. This roadway must be a minimum of 20 feet in width and must be paved either with bituminous concrete or bituminous treated gravel.

A similar permit was granted to Simon Cutter, agent for Carl Finlay at the Board of Appeals' June 23 meeting. They voted unanimously to allow the construction of a single family dwelling on the land owned by Carl Finely on Fairmount Avenue. The condition of the permit was that a roadway no less than 20 feet in width be constructed of either bituminous concrete of bituminous treated gravel.

Among other decisions, the board voted unanimously to grant a permit to Richard and Paula Whitney, 4 Dadant Dr., to construct an addition to their home within a required reserve side yard. The Whitneys said at the meeting that they needed additional living space due to the size of their family.

The board also voted unanimously to grant a permit to John T. Gardner, Clark Street, for the purpose of building a shed within a required reserve side and rear yard.

George L. Barboza, Lincoln avenue was granted a variance authorizing the installment of a swimming pool within a required reserve rear yard.

The board also voted unanimously to grant a special permit to Michael R. Carlson, 16 Federal St., for the purpose of converting an existing garage into an in-law apartment which would be attached to the house by a common room. This permit will authmatically expire upon the death of Mrs. Mary Snelgrove or the transfer of the property owned by Carlson.

Heat precautions

This has been an extremely hot month. Excessive heat is dangerous to anyone, but especially to the elderly. A few facts seniors should be aware of:

An ordinarly, healthy person loses body moisture through evaporation at a rate of about two quarts an hour during strenuous activity on a very hot day. In normal summer weather the heat glands which number 300-400 per square centimeter of skin, can handle most demands. It is only when the heat becomes excessive that complications arise. Heat prostration or heat strokes become common, especially among the elderly. A flushed face, rapid heartbeat, headache, dizziness or irritability are signs of heat strokes. If any of these signs occur, seniors should check with their doctors, but an attempt can be made to avoid them by letting heavy work wait until it cools off.

Stoneham's First Unitarian Church

Some landmarks stay that way

By STEVEN—ADELE MORLEY

Part 1 of 2

For those Stonehamites who fret about the demolishing of town landmarks, they should be made aware that there are a few left, though struggling to survive. One such landmark is the First Unitarian Church, located on the corner of Central and Common Streets.

In 1858 a Unitarian Society was organized, as a need was felt for a liberal religion. For only a short time they met in the Universalist Church, which was located on the side of the present church, but later met in the Town Hall until the society merged with the Universalists in 1866.

In 1867 it was "voted that the treasurer be instructed to give a bond to the Universalist society of this town of $4000, that this society will construct a new church on this site." After its merger, it was called the Christian Union Church.

Instead of tearing down the original Universalist Church, it was sold to the Catholics, and was moved to the corner of Central and Pomeworth Streets. It has since been torn down.

The present "new" church was dedicated on January 1, 1869. It is of the Gothic style of architecture. A separate subscription was raised for the church bell and the town clock. Today this clock is in excellent condition and keeps exact time. The bell is the largest one in this vicinity, having a beautiful mellow tone. Colonel Elbridge Gerry gave the clock inside the church. This was one of his last requests just before his death.

Up through the years the clock at the church has been known as the Town Clock. For many years it was wound by hand, lifting half-ton weights from the cellar to the tower. Today it is run by electricity. Money was raised in 1965 as a memorial to Herbert Huntoon, who was a great worker in the church and very much interested in the maintenance of the clock.

The church structure is the place for another landmark in Stoneham. Within its old walls is housed a fine two-manual tracker-action organ. It is said that there are no more than two of its kind in the Northeast today.

The instrument contains fifteen ranks of pipes and is listed as E. & G.G. Hook's (located in Boston) opus 466. The organ is still in use and even has its original paint on the case pipes.

The organ was the gift of the ladies connected with the church. The survival of such an organ in the greater Boston area is remarkable and has been worthy of celebration in many recitals through its first century, and is still in good use in its second century of service. The instrument was built by the famous Boston firm in 1868 and was dedicated with the church on January of 1869.

The organ stands in the rear gallery. Its handsome black walnut case shows the original floral design painted on the front pipes. The durable tracker-action operates 15 sets of pipes on two manuals and pedal. The organ has remained intact for over 100 years now, and has never been changed in any way. It was cleaned and tuned in the fall of 1968 and a recital was given which attracted a capacity audience.

The Universalist minister at that time finished out his term and became the first minister of the new Christian Union Church. He resigned, and the Rev. E.B. Fairhild took up the pastorage on November 19, 1867. During his time the church took on added life and the church was filled to capacity. New pews had to be added even to the very front and sides of the church. Fairchild remained as minister until his religious convictions caused him to leave the church in 1876.

On February 12, 1889, at the beginning of Rev. J.H. Whitmore's pastorage, it was voted "that we change the corporate name of the church from Christian Union to the 'First Unitarian Church of Stoneham.'" It was voted to adopt the covenant, "In the love of Truth and in the spirit of Jesus Christ, we join for the worship of God and the service of man." At the time, the church had its first woman minister, the Rev. Mrs. Judith Urquhart. To become a member of the free church one had only to sign the covenant and by-laws. Today, to become a voting member, all one has to do is sign the membership book. And the old covenant, like everything else, has evolved with the times in order to better fit the needs of contemporary folks.

In May, 1968, Mildred Walker Hay completed her 50 years as organist at the First Unitarian Church in Stoneham.

At that time it was said that Mrs. Hay had probably played for more church services, weddings and funerals than any other woman in the area. Her charm and congenial nature was known to everyone. Her loyalty, not only to the church and its music affiliations, but also to the Rainbow Girls as Rainbow Mother for many years, proved her love for her church and its members.

Mrs. Hay grew up in Stoneham. Her mother died when she was a small child. She was brought up by her Grandmother Messer, an aunt, Lura Messer, and her father, Charles Walker. She was graduated from Stoneham High School, Class of 1910. Mrs. Hay took music lessons from Eleanor Brigham and organ lessons from Josephine Collier and A.J. Wilson of Winchester.

Mrs. Hay was a teacher of piano for over sixty years. She not only helped hundreds of children with their musical interests, she started many musical careers. She was also secretary and treasurer of the Town Hall Organ Committee from the start, when the organ was presented to the town by Ralph Patch. She always played the organ for the march at High School graduation when it was held there.

Mrs. Hay gave many recitals and as late as 1968 she continued to teach the

England sends US punk violence

America has never been able to sever the umbilical cord that ties it to England. British influence in American writing is evident in everything from stage plays to magazines. British influence has crept into television, particularly educational tv. There's music. Remember the Beatles? Once those four hairy hipsters from Liverpool caught on here, America was deluged with the British sound. Then comes politics. Until last November, some political analysts feared that America wasn't far behind England's socialist economic collapse. The sudden shift to right wing philosophy here seems to have kept that premonition from occuring.

There's a new influence England is having over America, and for some people it might be very frightening: the current youth gang terrorism sweeping England seems to be fostering a resurgence in urban gang dominance in some American cities. Daily newscasts are peppered with stories about how England's youths are running amok in packs nightly and causing incalculable destruction to life and property. We're hearing reasons for the violence that run the gamut from racial hatred to unemployment, while officials in England say it's simply a case of mindless, drug-induced hooliganism. The youths say all this rebellion shouldn't come as a surprise; they've been telling the establishment how they feel through their music for years. Recently, the music that has been coming out of England is called new wave and punk. The young people claim nobody's been listening to their messages.

Well, that's just not true. Because the kids in America have been listening to punk music, and they're picking up on the vibes that advocate violence and rebellion. With unemployment in the sixteen to twenty-five year old group here equally high as in England, America's young people are finding plenty of time to follow the footsteps of England's youthful hooligans. Boston is one of the cities whose young people are being noticeably influenced by England's punk violence. A local young man tells about his encounter with punk violence:

"A friend and I were at a bar in Kenmore Square. We were leaving and heading for our car in a nearby parking lot. When we got there, we noticed a gang of young people milling around. There were about a dozen of them, and they looked no more than fifteen or sixteen years old. We didn't pay much attention to them. Until they jumped us. I'm six two and weigh about one ninety, and my friend is about the same. I ended up with ten stitches across my forehead, a couple of broken ribs, a mess of bruises and cuts, and my face looked like a hunk of raw meat. My friend was knocked unconscious and had to spend some time in the hospital. He's still not right. What burns me is they didn't even bother to rob us!"

This story sounds like umpteen others one reads about every week in the paper. Except for the fact that the victims were not attacked by a small number of individuals whose motive was robbery. They were jumped by a roaming gang that describe themselves as members of the punk culture who perpetrate violence for the sake of bashing in someone's head. They look, dress and act like the stereotyped punk that was popular in the late fifties and early sixties in America. The punk violence is directly linked to the punk rock movement in music, and apparently, the more the music catches on, the more the incidences of violence occur.

Explains a spokesman for the Boston police department: "These incidents are happening more and more lately. Gangs of these punks are getting their kicks out of randomly beating up people they encounter on the streets late at night." I asked him about the Kenmore Square area where the two local young men were badly beaten. "In the Kenmore Square area there are about two dozen kids who are the real problem. They move around a lot, so it's not easy to track them down. There's no way to describe them except as punks."

According to police, drugs are a major contribution to the problem of punk violence. Parental influence, on the other hand, doesn't seem to make much difference. In a recent broadcast network report, a young man participating in England's violent spree said parents have no influence over him and his peers, they're "doing their own thing." Here the similarities in attitudes are not startling: young people who are ardent followers of the punk movement seem to have discarded concern for families and authoritarian figures in general.

"Most of these kids are from broken homes, or have parents who just don't care, we've found," the police spokesman says. "When you've got no father and your mother is a drunk and sleeps around, you tend to gravitate toward your peers for a feeling of belonging. When your friends think nothing of destroying property and breaking heads, you go along, because you don't want to be left out. That's how it all begins. Then add drugs and you've got a real serious problem."

This on top of the inability to find work allow outlets like punk violence to take hold of a young person's lifestyle. But helping to find jobs for these kids isn't the responsibility of the police. Their job is to prevent what usually results from too many idle, unemployed youths congregating together. In England police aren't permitted to carry guns, therefore, their efforts to quell disturbances with any kind of real authority are hampered. But here, police may be forced to rely more on their weapons, in light of some of the weapons that have been confiscated from Boston's street gangs. Says the police spokesperson, "These kids are not using just their hands. They're coming up with some very ingenious weaponry. We've found brass knuckle-like weapons that have two nails attached to them so that the attacker can rip out your eyes with one punch. Another popular weapon

NACEL swaps people

Woburn Mall was the meeting place for local youngsters on July 2 as they began a trip to France. The participants in the North Atlantic Cultural Exchange League (NACEL) program live with a French family for four weeks, sharing in the everyday life style of their host families. They subtly serve as goodwill ambassadors for their communities and the United States. However, their form of diplomacy is performed around dining tables and not the formal conference tables used by government officials.

Many of the Americans have previously been involved in the NACEL program when their families hosted young people from France last summer.

Area coordinator, Virginia Adams of 279 Pleasant St., Reading escorted the participants to Bradley Field, Conn. where they joined 240 other New Englanders for departure. "This segment of my work is particularly pleasing to me," said Mrs. Adams. "These excited youngsters have prepared for the experience and will be fine re presentatives of our country."

Summer is a busy time for Mrs. Adams as she is currently in the process of placing about 50 French teens with American families for the month of August. If you would like more information about the NACEL program, contact Mrs. Adams at the above address or call 944-7577.

Youth baseball tourney

Inter-town Youth Baseball competition will make its first appearance in Reading next month when Reading Youth Baseball and The Daily Times-Chronicle co-sponsor the first annual RYB All-Star tournament for 11- and 12-year-olds.

The tournament will be run under an eight-team, double elimination format, and will get underway on Saturday, August 15 at Reading's Little League Park on Pleasant St. Barring any signifiacnt rain the delays the tournament will finish no later than Wednesday, August 26.

A $50 entry fee into the tournament will cover the cost of baseballs, umpires, field maintenance, and championship and runner-up trophies.

Anyone wishing to enter a team in the tournament should contact either Fred Conover (944-2668) or Ken Robinson (944-0868).

This week's choice of readers' poetry

ON A SUNDAY AFTERNOON
AT WINGAERSHEEK

'Tis age beyond years,
at fifty-three,
to think naught more could exciting be:
and proven wrong
by a walk in the edge of the sea.

With shoes in hand and love at side:
burning feet 'freshed
through the ebb and tide,
as childhood returns.

Fleeting footprints in shifting sand, too short-lived for study and that's good for they would record where we have been
which, for now,
we care to forget.

Now warm' now cool
the waters fool
expectant senses gladly numbed
'gainst life's heaviness and tuned to bouyant peace.

Ankles pressured with each stride encourage waders to abide and slow the approach of sloshing's end.

Frolicking infant, intriguing; deceived to think he could catch the bubbling beads, while in competitive fun
the canine welp
charges the waves
with his prize of kelp;
but here, no resentment to the splash of his passing dash.

The rock beneath; the sun above-- both warm;
therapy they
to those who basking in them lay.

Now rested,
pleasure-vested;
Inspired,
the day retired,
Return we
through the edge of the sea
And thankfully receive a double part of an unexpectedly excited heart.

Letter to the Editor

One - sided

Dear Editor

After reading the article on Pilgrim I by Charles C. Ryan in this newspaper, I am very unhappy with the gross one-sidedness of this story.

A newspaper should take the initiative to present a well-researched story. This article sounds as if it was obtained through Boston Edison sources with no consideration given to the other points of view.

Nuclear wastes are active for longer then we know how to safely store them. There is no approved method of properly storing them during the thousands of years necessary to render them harmless.

Nuclear power has been funded by the federal government to the tune of $40 billion and enjoys the advantage of the Price-Anderson Act which limits the total liability for property damages in case of an accident to $500 million.

I believe that only renewable energy sources should receive so much of the public's and federal government's money. Truth in presenting the complete story- both pro and con- on your part, would shed proper light on this controversial issue.

Zap weeds, not trees

In the past couple of years there has been an increase in the popularity of a variety of hand operated power machines used for "zapping" weeds and trimming lawns. These power trimmers are quick and very effective for zapping weeds in hard to reach places and for edging lawns. Aside from trimming lawns and chopping down weeds they can be a threat to other plants!

Homeowners should follow the normal precautions with these trimmers as would be followed with any other power operated garden equipment. However, you should realize that these trimmers can be dangerous when used carelessly around trees and other desireable plant materials. In some cases injury to annual and perennial flowers and bark of shrubs and trees has been evident and may result in girdling and death of these plants. Be particularly careful around younger trees with thinner bark, as these are more easily injured.

Just a word to the wise — although these trimming machines are more convenient, with a little extra time and care, weed and trimming problems can be eased. However, be aware of these possible problems which could result from misuse of this equipment!

Plant summer flowers now

After the first of July, many home gardeners believe the garden planting season is over. This is not true if plants rather than seed are used to start the garden.

If your home grounds or landscape could still use a few flowering plants for summer color or if your summer cottage needs brightening, now is the time to plant flowers. Also, if you need a few replacements for seedlings and earlier set plants which may have been victims to insects, diseases, rabbits or other garden pests, you can still set out replacements.

Many local garden centers and florists still have a supply of garden annuals for those who need them. Special crops of annual plants are grown for the month of July so these will be in peak condition to set in your garden for immediate colorful displays at this time.

So if you need bright petunias, snapdragons, zinnias for cutflowers or over a hundred annual flower varieties these are still available from local garden centers and florists. Whether you require replacement plants, need to add a few more plants to a border or if your green thumb is just late getting the garden urge, annual plants are still in good supply.

So don't think the garden planting season is over because summer has arrived. Visit your local florist and see the beautiful flowers still available for your garden this month.

is a baseball bat with nails through the top. Then there's the usual arsenal — chains, pipes, knives, guns."

Officials in England are currently pouring over studies done in this country on the racial riots of the sixties to hopefully find a solution to their problem. In the meantime, America has a problem of its own brewing, so it would probably behoove authorities here to pay attention to the lyrics of the songs that young people are listening to. The words will give them a good idea of what's on kids' minds. They might also provide a clue as to how the problem might be prevented from exploding into the suburbs the way the violence in England has spread like a cancer from the urban areas into rural communities.

Telephones sound strange

Just as people in other countries speak different languages, so do telephones. Call someone in the Middle East, for example, and the telephone doesn't ring in intervals — it rings continuously until someone answers it.

In France "'country" telephones have a different sound from those in the cities. Busy signals also vary from place to place, both in tone and frequency.

So how does a company that manufacturers telecommunications equipment for foreign markets deal with this situation? By incorporating into its products special equipment that can produce tones in any language. And that is exactly what Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System, has done.

At its Kearny Works in New Jersey, the company is manufacturing a new device — the Call Program System — that can produce rings and buzzes in different frequencies, intervals and pitches. When used in conjunction with an electronic switching sytem — a modern switching device — it can ring telephones anywhere in the world.

According to Western Electric engineers, this development is significant because now the company no longer has to custom build the telecommunications equipment it ships overseas.

What made the development of this Call Progress System possible is modern technology, and in particular, microprocessors — miniature devices that process information at amazing speeds.

Virtually nonexistent before the mid-1970's, microprocessors can now be found in a number of products — in new cars to regulate fuel consumption, in electronic games, in microwave ovens and in telecommunications systems.

First Unitarian Church

youth of Stoneham. She never missed a Sunday playing the hundred-year-old organ of the First Unitarian Church. She did make 60 years as the church organist before she died in the 1970s. A plaque on the organ, presented to her from the congregation, reads 1914-1974.

The church held an Organ Centennial Recital on Sunday, September 29, 1968. It is said that the church was filled with people. The Rev. Bradford Mitchell, assistant minister of the Follen Church in Lexington, who was living in the church parsonage, made the opening remarks and introduced the President of the Organ Club of Boston, Mr. Edward Broadway. Broadway explained about the organ, and told of its unusual tracker-action system that was built to last 100 years as it was originally installed to do. The only change at that time was to put in an electric motor instead of using the hand pump. He then asked Mildred Walker Hay to stand up so that the people could see the person who at that time had played the organ for 50 of its first 100 years.

Jack Fisher, who was on the faculty of Boston University, and was the director of Music at the Union Church in Waban, was the organist. His many important positions across the nation and his enthusiasm for early American organs, made him a highly regarded player of tracker instruments. The event was open to the public and refreshments were served.

Today, the self-governing church group, and every Unitarian Church is self-governing, is affiliated with the Unitarian Universalist Association.

Dianne Manikowski, a resident of Reading, is the organist who plays for Sunday services. Holly Baylies, who up until April of this year acted as Parish Chairperson for the church, says, "The organ is in good condition considering its age and its use, but it does need repairs and extra attention."

Baylies also said, "The old clock is in good running condition but the tower that holds it is rotting. In fact, the entire church, somewhere, needs repairs and perhaps some renovating. We are working on this problem now."

The old church has had too many ministers down through the years to recount them all. At the present it is a ministerless church. Services are led by lay persons and guest ministers. The parsonage has been sold, and the congregation has been reduced to only a handful of faithful Unitarians. Many have for one reason or another found other Unitarian churches to go to. There has been inner turmoil within the confines of the old landmark but "The congregation of the faithful are really working to build the church up again. It is a landmark that must survive. We want very much to continue to be a visible liberal voice in this community."

What any relic needs is people to love it. And it needs the money that the people bring to it.

In the past few years there has been some confusion about the old church and Our Place, which have been working cooperatively. Contrary to what most folks in the area think, they are not one group. Our Place is a M.E.L.D. Center that rents space from the church. However, Our Place will soon move to its own quarters, located at 38 Pleasant Street. Holly Baylies is the Center's Program Director. As she is active in both the church and the center, folks have confused her initial positions.

From early fall until the first week in June, every year, the old church carries on in its traditional way. Every Sunday the deep mellow tones of the organ fill its sacred walls. Its muted sounds can be heard outside, on the streets. Folks gather together to share a liberal way of worshipping that is as old as time itself. After services, folks gather together to share refreshments that were made by a member of the congregation, and there is good fellowship, and truths are exchanged.

For those who respect age, and for those who believe that time makes buildings and musical instruments more precious, the two — church and organ — stand together. Each is a part of the other now. They wait for those who may come and share. They wait to ever serve the community. For they must know that such landmarks are meant to last.

NEXT WEEK: An examination of the Wayside Community Pulpit.

Sports-related injuries reviewed by Dr. Girouard

Dr. William W. Girouard, Chiropractic Physician of Woburn, attended this past weekend a seminar on Sports Injuries. The seminar was given by Dr. George Goodheart of Detroit, Michigan. Dr. Goodheart, founder of the International College of Applied Kinesiology and the first chiropractor appointed to the U.S. Olympics at Lake Placid is a world leader in chiropractic health care and research.

The seminar presented methods for the non-surgical, non-drug treatment of sports related injury. Frequently, trauma causes a muscular and-or ligamentous injury to a joing area. Traditional therapies such as muscle exercises, surgery and physical therapy are frequently inadequate to successfully manage and treat such injuries. Surgery can result in incomplete correction and a tendency to reinjury. Muscle rehabilitation and physical therapy can also fall short of desired results.

Procedures for re-establishing the muscular and ligamentous integrity to the body, as developed and taught by Dr. Goodheart and other clinicians, were presented at the seminar. Unstable and traumatized muscles result in unstable and painful joints, prone to re-injury at the attempt of activity. Neurolymphatic, golgi tendon, spindle cell and other applied kinesology procedures taught enables the chiropractic physician to increase the stability and strength of the injured part and decrease the pain that activity would otherwise bring. In many cases such procedures allows an injured person to return to physical activity he or she would otherwise be unable to perform.

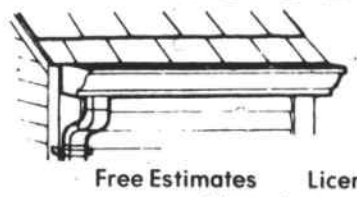

Also, having properly balanced joints and muscles prevents injuries and decreases risk to injury during physical activity.

Dr. Goodheart, having treated many Olympic athletes with much success, is a frequent lecturer to the chiropractic profession and uses his 42 years of experience to present the most recent and important developments in the area of chiropractic health care and sports medicine.

Dr. Girouard is a member of the Metabolic Research Foundation, Life Energy Foundation and is president of Health thru Nutrition, Inc. a nutritional consulting service located at his Woburn office.

He is a native of Woburn, maintains a private practice of chiropractic at is office at 27 Salem Street in Woburn.

REFERRAL SERVICE

Bentley College has created a new student job referral service for area businesses and organizations.

The Job Location and Development Program acts as a clearing house by recruiting part-time job listings from area businesses, publicizing these positions among interested students, and referring pre-screened students to the employers.

According to Lisa Vinson, director of the program, "The Job Locator Program provides an opportunity for a firm to hire a qualified part-time employee with a solid educational background. It can be a further asset to a company by providing a flexible work force, able to be scheduled around the work flow of the company."

Ideally, the service refers qualified students into jobs that are directly related to their majors in college. Since the programs inception, Bentley students have been placed into a variety of positions such as: computer assistants and programmers, marketing researchers, accounting clerks, landscapers, administrative assistants, youth counselors, telephone interviewers, key punchers, and research assistants.

Thus far, firms such as IBM, Honeywell, Gillette, Interactive Data Corp., Touche-Ross and Co. and even the Boston Celtics Organization have taken advantage of Bentley College's Job Locator Program.

For further information on the Job Location and Development Program at Bentley College contact Lisa Vinson at 891-3168.

Retired Men's Club

Cape Cod "visited"

The Retired Men's Club of Wakefield held its first meeting of the month, Wednesday, July 8th, at the First Parish Congregational Church of Wakefield at 9 A.M. The original program had been changed and the members were treated to an impressive film entitled "Portrait of Cape Cod" sponsored and originated by the Cape Cod Chamber of Commerce. It had beautiful back-ground music, commentary showing many scenes of prominent towns, beaches, historic landmarks all along the Cape, familiar to many of the members.

There were pictures of Falmouth, Woods Hole and the Oceanographic Institute with its various boats there used for Scientific Research for which Woods Hole is noted. Also was shown Hyannis Port and an aerial view of the Kennedy Compound made famous while President John F. Kennedy's residence. This helped to attract many tourists to the Cape Area. We saw photos of the Cape Cod National Seashore with visitors on the various trails open to the public crossing swamps and saw much wild life. The film brought us down to Provincetown to see a monument 300 feet high, from which on a clear day you could see Boston. The beaches were interesting, and of course with everybody enjoying swimming, bathing costumes were prominent and interesting to the Men's Club. Sports were also shown in the film, golf, tennis, the traffic jams or bridge repairs on the Cape but the beautiful film was most enjoyed by all the members of the Retired Men's Club. William Benhke was the projectionist, familiar with 16 mm. films and the performance went off very smoothly.

The regular meeting of the Men's Club began at 9 A.M. with a hospitality hour, and a business meeting at 9:45 A.M. opened by President George Flewelling of Lynnfield. He announced that there were 202 members present, a low number, but many members were on vacation. There were four visitors: Richard Hawes of Wakefield, Cliff Conley and Frank Roach of Lynnfield, and Robert W. Smith of Malden.

Thomas Coughlin read the names of members having birthdays since the last meeting. Ten were present. Four had birthdays on the Fourth of July. Bob Sproul led the group in singing "Happy Birthday" and if he was even more vocal than usual it could have been because he had a birthday too. He did not say how old he was.

Joe Whiting, Chairman of the Sick and Visiting Committee, reported members who were in hospitals and recuperating at home. Gus Seavey brought out the door prize, a red flashlight wrapped up like a giant fire-cracker which was won by William McRae. It was presented by President George Flewelling wearing a patriotic straw hat with the American Flag on the front, appropriate for the 4th of July activities. Lorry Stockwell entertained with his usual humorous stories.

Roger Callahan was called upon to play his harmonica and included several of the old songs, and also related an experience when he was a teenager at the Boston YMCA Camp on Lake Winnepesaukee.

The group was reminded that in case of emergency there are four exits in the large hall, and a Safety Committee was being forced to man these exits.

Bob Sproul reported on the status of trips. The Northfield trip included a one and a half hour boat trip on the Connecticut River and a visit to a power plant. There will be a Boston Harbour trip scheduled which will include a visit to the Quincy Market. In August there will be a boat trip to Georges Island. Mr. Sproul then directed the men in singing "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree", "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" and "Make America Proud of You."

Today's meting of the Retired Men's Club featured Ms. Margaret M. McPherson of the Boston Gas Company whose subject was "The Good Old Days or Were They" aided by slides taking us back as far as the 1890's.

Labor does a U- turn

RISING DEMAND FOR NONUNION EMPLOYEES

By Babson's Reports Inc., Wellesley Hills, Mass. July 9, 1981. The persistent upward course in labor costs and the high rate of unemployment in many of the nation's key industries is causing a marked reshuffling in the labor field. For instance, it is becoming easier all the time for nonunion and generally lower-paid workers to compete successfully for available posts in or related to such all-important industries as autos, steel, coal, and especially construction. Management is, of course, quick to encourage the hiring of low-wage employees to help keep within reason labor costs that have been steadily on the rise at a brisk pace for several decades.

CHANGES IN CONSTRUCTION

Over the past 20 years, there has been a gradual but widespread increase in the share of the nation's building done by nonunion labor. Best estimates indicate that the proportion of the total done by openshop contractors in 1968-1969 was a mere 20 percent. At the present time, however, better than 60 percent of all construction business is in the hands of nonunion companies — even though there may be some hiring of union subcontractors along the way. At the basis of this situation is, of course, the fact that union wage rates have become so exaggeratedly high that it has been impossible for some building to be started at all. The pressure has become so great, in fact, that the open-shop firms are spreading in more and more cities.

According to the analysts, the building trade unions still have a powerful grip on industry activities in a number of the larger metropolitan centers including Chicago, New York, and Philadelphia. But even in the strongholds the nonunionists are making considerable headway, particularly where restrictions of various types (including the use of open-shop subcontractors) are flexible enough to permit nonlabor advances. Associated Builders & Contractors represent approximately 16,000 so-called "merit shop" or open firms. It should be noted that in areas flush with open shops, even long-established trade unionists in the field are often forced to accept more moderate raises when their contracts expire or come up for reopening.

AUTO EMPLOYMENT PROBLEMS

Even the fact that automotive workers have long been mostly organized has not been able to prevent heavy job losses under the troubling conditions that have developed over the past few years. Industry officials are mainly agreed that the greatest part of the joblessness in their segment of the economy has been caused by the relatively cheap labor in Japan. Japanese auto workers are highly paid in terms of their own economic standards, but they are receiving only about one-half the approximately $20 an hour in the paychecks of their American counterparts. And even with shipping outlays, Japanese car prices here are still lower than — or at least matching — the retail costs of U.S. autos.

PRICING OURSELVES OUT OF MARKETS

While auto sales are still falling, and are below the discouraging levels of a year ago, the wage rates of auto workers are some 60 percent higher than the average U.S. industrial wage. In the middle 1960s they were only 20 percent above the nation's industrial average. Many economic observers are convinced that such soaring pay rates are entirely unrealistic during a period of overwhelming setbacks in production and sales. It has been pointed out many times that a number of our enterprises permit themselves to be priced out of world markets because of lack of restraint in terms of labor costs.

BAD FOR THE UNIONS

It is easy to see why employers — wherever possible — prefer to take on open-shop employees rather than the elite workers whose hourly "take" has been pushed nearly through the roof. Not for many years has the search for men and women willing to work for fair but not wildly excessive wages been so avid. Naturally, this is making it more difficult for unions to organize and to keep their clout.

New England economic health

The New England economy weakened in April. Nonagricultural employment declined for the second consecutive month with job losses occurring in nonmanufacturing as well as in manufacturing. The average workweek of factory production workers was reduced. Production levels at New England manufacturing plants also declined. Construction contract awards for residential and nonbuilding projects were cut sharply following substantial increases in March. Only contract awards for nonresidential projects increased. Despite these indications of a softening in the economy, the New England unemployment rate declined in April. Retail sales increased in March, the latest month for which regional data are available.

Nonagricultural employment in New England fell by 42,600 in April. Despite the decline, the April 1981 employment total of 5,523,400, seasonally adjusted, was still 32,000 above the level of April 1980. All the New England states experienced employment cutbacks between March and April, but only Maine and Rhode Island suffered job losses over the year.

Both manufacturing and nonmanufacturing establishments provided fewer jobs in April than in March, but the decline was much more pronounced in nonmanufacturing. Nonmanufacturing employment fell by 39,400 during the month. Most major industries reduced employment with the greatest losses occurring in construction. Manufacturing employment fell by 3,200 in April. Durable goods plants accounted for most of the reduction. Over the year, manufacturing employment was down by 33,900 jobs while nonmanufacturing employment remained 65,900 above the April 1980 total.

Another indication of a softening in the regional economy during April was the change in hours worked. The average workweek of manufacturing production workers declined in April to 40.5 hours, seasonally adjusted, from 40.6 hours in March and 41.1 hours in February. On a state basis, hours worked were cut in Connecticut and Rhode Island and were unchanged in the remaining states. Compared with a year earlier, the average workweek for the region was unchanged; an increase in hours worked at Massachusetts plants was offset by reductions in most other states.

The New England unemployment rate declined in April to a seasonally adjusted 5.8 percent after holding steady at 6.1 percent during the January-March period. The jobless rate for April 1980 was 5.6 percent. The national unemployment rate in April was 7.3 percent. The April drop in the New England rate was largely due to a decrease in the Massachusetts rate from 6.1 percent in March to 5.4 percent. Unemployment rates in the rest of New England changed very little. Compared with a year ago, small increases in unemployment in Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island more than offset reduced unemployment in the three northern New England states.

Manufacturing output for April reflected the reduction in factory jobs and hours worked. The seasonally adjusted New England manufacturing production index, compiled by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, decined in April to 147.7 percent of the 1967 base period average from the revised March average of 149.6 percent. The index remained above the 145.7 percent of April 1980. Both the durables and nondurables production indexes fell in April, but continued to show small increases over year-earlier levels.

Construction activity in the region fell back in April following a very strong March. The nominal value of contracts awarded during April for all types of projects declined 14.4 percent from the previous month to total 51.9 percent more than in April 1980. Contract awards for residential construction, which are seasonally adjusted, declined 36.7 percent from the March value but remained 52.7 percent above the year-earlier total. Nonbuilding contract awards dropped 43.2 percent from the previous month and were 7.4 percent below the year-earlier level. Nonresidential construction was the only segment of the industry in which awards increased in the month; nonresidential contract awards were 1.9 percent higher in April than in March and 85.4 percent higher than in April of last year.

Host families for French visitors needed

During a four week period this summer, a group of French students aged fourteen to twenty will be coming to the Wakefield area under the sponsorship of American International Education and Training, Incorporated. The principle of the program is that the experience of living with an American family is invaluable for young foreign students seeking to learn our language and culture. These young people hope to stay with families in the Wakefield region from July 31 to August 28 in order to learn first hand about American family life.

The cost of traveling abroad is skyrocketing and the opportunities for cultural exchange may be drastically effected by Proposition 2½. However you can make this summer a cultural experience for your own family and at the same time help a young French student come to know the American people, their language and customs.

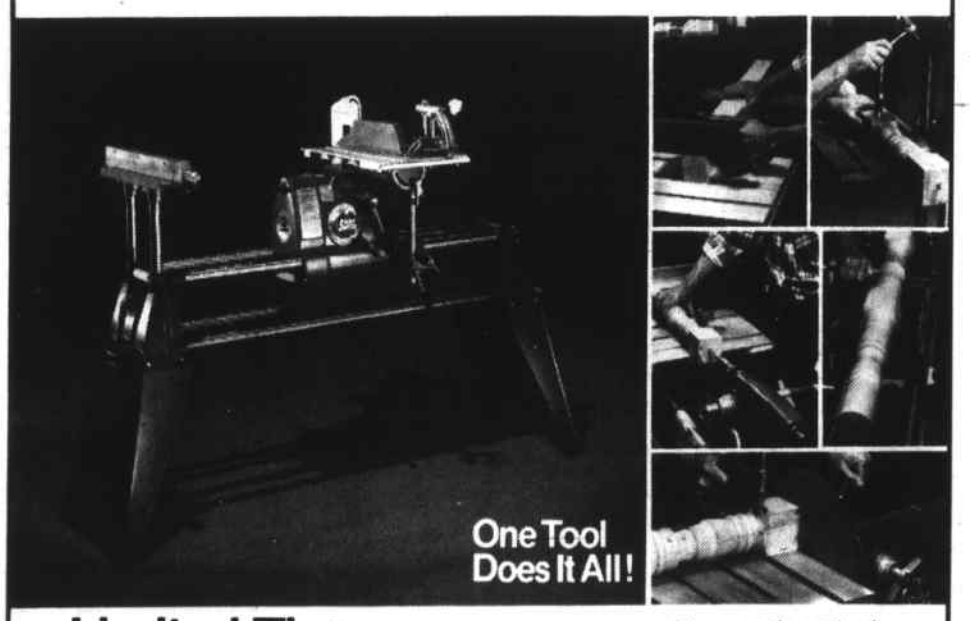

The host family is asked to provide a place to sleep, food and transportation to and from Nazareth Academy in Wakefield five days a week during the four week period. In exchange, they will share the enthusiasm and learning experiences of these young Europeans. Families from Winchester, Malden, Melrose and Wakefield have already opened their homes and will serve as host families.

Students will attend classes from nine to twelve Monday through Friday and will participate in four full-day excursions including visits to Salem, Rockport, George's Island, the New England Aquarium, one of the Gloucester beaches, and Newport, Rhode Island. Host families will be encouraged to attend these trips as well as be invited to participate in our planned afternoon and evening activities.

Anyone interested in more information about becoming a host family (single parents and childless couples of any age are welcome) or who may wish to help in some other way with this valuable program should contact Lisa Dooley, Program Coordinator for American International in the Wakefield area. Call 470-0768 soon to make your summer a real experience for the whole family. Or write: L. Dooley, A-5 Colonial Drive, Andover, Ma. 01810.

Hearing Dog Center

Breaking the sound barrier

Red Acre Farm in Stow, Massachusetts, a non-profit organization established in 1906 to provide a home for old and worn-out horses, has announced the opening of a new Hearing Dog Center. This effort will provide hearing impaired people in New England and New York State with the ability to respond to vital "sounds" of living, helped by abandoned and homeless animals.

"The problems of deafness are deeper and more complex if not more important than those of blindness," Miss Helen Keller once said. "Deafness is a much worse misfortune, for it means the loss of the most vital stimulus — the sound of the voice that brings language, sets thoughts astir, and keeps us in the intellectual company of man."

Imagine being severely to profoundly deaf as are nearly two million people in the United States today. For these individuals, "sounds" are shut off. Thus, when a bell rings, a siren wails or a baby cries, hearing impaired people are often unable to respond. The "Hearing Dog" offers a solution to this problem.

Under the auspices of the American Humane Association, Red Acre Farm will provide a Hearing Dog for anyone with a severe to profound hearing loss, living alone or with other hearing impaired people, who is at least 21 years old. Prospective owners must agree to sustain a training program. Pre-placement visits are made to determine the probability for successful placement, care and use of the Hearing Dog. Counselors use sign language and can communicate directly with those who apply.

Hearing Dogs areplaced free of charge, although donations are welcome from those able to afford it. Even though it costs over $5,000 to train, place and follow up each dog, no one is denied a dog if he is financially unable to contribute to its cost.

Sustained entirely by donations from caring friends — no tax dollars suport this humane service — Red Acre Farm will be helped by the Animal Rescue League of Boston which has agreed to supply dogs and veterinary care at no cost.

Most dogs selected for training are mixed breeds and small to medium sized. Dogs will be about one year old, indicate intelligence, good health and have the proper temperament for training. They will be trained for three to four months in basic obedience and "sound keying" — zeroing in on specific noises according to the recipient's mode of living. Sounds often selected include an alarm clock, smoke detector, door bell or buzzer, a baby's cry or a telephone-TTY. Training takes place in the Hearing Dog Center where a home-like atmosphere has been created. A placement counselor takes the dog to its new home for a final week of training. In this way a smooth transition is assured. Progress reports are required and follow-up visits occur making sure the arrangement works well. After three months of satisfactory performance in the home, a Hearing Dog is certified. The owner is presented with a wallet-sized identification card and a blaze orange collar and leash for the dog. These two pieces of identification awarded by Red Acre Farm entitle the dog and owner to the same legal rights enjoyed by guide dogs for the blind.

Red Acre Farm, founded by Miss Harriet G. Bird, is well known for initiating and encouraging projects that will prevent and alleviate suffering in humans and animals.

Theatre review

StarCase showcases Pudding

By DAN KENNEDY

The setting at 12 Holyoke Street, Cambridge - headquarters of Harvard's Hasty Pudding Club - was suitably bizarre.

In a steamy, funky, second-floor room, shirt-and-tie media types belted down champagne and wolfed cheese and crackers while doing their best to avoid the assorted executives wanting to bestow quotes they hoped would be memorable.

Posters and pictures from the Hasty Pudding's 186-year history adorned the walls. A beat-up upright piano was off to one side. Above the fireplace were three realistic-looking alligators, symbols of the society. And in front of the fireplace was a silver video screen.

The screen was where, shortly, StarCase would preview the highlights of "Serf's Up!" the Hasty Pudding's 1981 production.

"This place sort of grows on you," said Lenna L. Warner of StarCase's Boston public relations firm, Agnew, Carter, McCarthy, Inc. "We came here this afternoon. There were beer bottles and cigarette butts all over the floor."

The two-hour production will be broadcast Sunday, July 26, at 6 p.m. on StarCase, Channel 68 (WQTV), a pay-TV channel.

Although the evening was billed as a media event, there were actually more Hasty Pudding members there than reporters - as became evident during the opening remarks by StarCase general manager Jeffrey I. Brodlieb.

"I went to Brown as an undergraduate," he said, and was greated with loud, long hissing.

If all this sounds rather collegiate, well, it was. And so was the show, or at least the 30 minutes of highlights which were shown to the media.

But it was also humorous, and it seems designed to exploit the unique potential of cable TV to reach out to small, select audiences who are attracted to certain kinds of programming.

Make no mistake about it. If "Serf's Up!", which is so sophomoric it makes "Animal House" look sophisticated, were put on the networks during prime time, it would probably attract a record-low rating.

But on cable, it doesn't have to attract a huge audience to be a success. A small but devoted audience is all that's necessary. If the only viewers turn out to be Harvard alumni, it will probably be worth the effort to StarCase.

In case you've never heard what Hasty Pudding does, let me try to explain. The all-male cast every year puts on a musical comedy, with many of the members dressing up as women. This year's theme, as you might have guessed from the title, was set in the Middle Ages - 10th-century England, to be exact. But that's completely beside the point - the plot is a mere setting for the antics of the cast.

In the middle of the title song, for example, the cast launches into "Surfin' Safari" and a medley of other Beach Boys songs. And the song titles themselves demonstrate the punning and campy humor: "The Peasants Are Revolting," "Coup for Two," "I want His Armor 'Round Me" and "Bar Maid, Bar Nun."

In another scene, the peasants are manufacturing coats of armor. On their smocks is written "Cleveland Armory," a spoof on a famous Harvard alumnus, Cleveland Amory.

One long scene - too long - features a chorus line of "girls" auditioning. At the end of the scene, one of the androgynous actors can't find a partner, asks, "Well who needs a bunch of girls with hairy chests anyway?" and minces off stage.

The problem with 30 minutes of highlights is that you can never quite get a fix on what's going on. Each scene is designed to be an all-stops-out production number. There's no dialogue, just singing and dancing. Undoubtedly, the two-hour version which viewers will watch Sunday will have better pacing, some dialogue and maybe even a bit of a story line.

It's too bad StarCase can't pass out lyric sheets to viewers as it did to the press, because the lyrics are off-color, sophisticated and witty. But the sound quality is so poor that it's likely the words will pass most viewers right by.

By the way, the alumni of the Hasty Pudding Club include Henry Cabot Lodge, Jack Lemmon, William Randolph Hearst, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Archibald Cox.

So, who knows? Maybe when you sit down in front of the tube Sunday, one of those hairy-legged young ladies will turn out to be a senator, a newspaper publisher or a justice of the Supreme Court.

EASTERSEAL SOFT-BALL

Area softball teams will soon receive invitations to play in the fourth annual WCOZ-Easter Seal Softball Marathon to benefit programs for disabled people in the Greater Boston area.

The Marathon will be played on fields in Boston, Burlington, Cambridge, Malden Quincy Randolph and Brockton on August 22 and 23. Last year, some 220 teams participated in the Greater Boston Softball Marathon and raised more than $58,000 for Easter Seals, making it the world's largest softball marathon.

The Marathon is open to any team in the area — company and industrial teams, league teams, pick-up teams, male or female. Every team entering the event with a minimum of $150 in pledges will receive two cases of beer, and each team raising $250 will also receive special Softball Marathon T-Shirts. Other prizes include a one week trip for two to Aruba from Transworld National Travel, arrangements by Garber Travel; complimentary team brunch at Delmonico's Restaurant, guests of the Hotel Lenox; and a weekend for two at the Kelly House, Martha's Vineyard, with transportation provided by Air New England.

Proceeds will benefit Easter Seal programs for physically disabled people in the Greater Boston area. These programs include swimming and recreation programs in 15 communities, support groups for people recovering from a stroke, a residential camping program for children and young adults with physical disabilities and physical, speech and occupational therapy.

Anyone wishing to register a team or form a team can get more information by calling Easter Seals at 482-3370 or the Softball Hotline at 482-3319.

Combine gas and oil heat

A new combination gas and oil burner that can cut fuel consumption from 15 to 35 percent is now available to residents and businesses in Cambridge, Somerville, Winchester, Woburn, Lexington, Burlington, Medford, Malden, Belmont, Arlington, Bedford and Watertown.

This burner, which has just been approved by the Massachusetts State Fire Marshall, is the latest innovation in fuel consumption. It is based on a well-proven technique, used successfully for years by large businesses and heavy industry. However, this is the first combination gas-oil burner specifically designed for the home and small business owner. Consumers can, with the flip of a switch, choose the fuel which is most readily available and-or least expensive.

Manufactured by ABC-Sunray, Plainview, New York, the gas-oil burner is available for installation now by Federal Heating and Engineering, Sommerville.

Consumers are directly and immediately affected by the rising cost of energy, whether gas or oil. It is predicted that the recent deregulation of oil and the impending deregulation of natural gas will result in higher prices, increasing steadily at a rapid rate.

Federal Heating, one of the few local companies to offer this new burner, has waged a 30 year continuous effort to encourage customers and non-customers to conserve fuel. In fact, the company's slogan since 1960 has been "Conservation is not a new word to us."

"In the long run, the issue will not be the price of fuel but the availability of gas and oil, resulting in a helpless feeling on the part of the average consumer," explained Al LaPointe, President of Federal Heating and Engineering.

"The price paid for fuel in no way relates to the heat value extracted from it. The opportunity for savings in fuel costs lies in the purchase of relatively inexpensive, but much more efficient equipment used to produce heat."

Federal Heating and Engineering is located at 26 Elm Street, Somerville, telephone (617) 623-1515.

Success In Your Kitchen

Preserving Summer's Bounty Without Sugar

How wonderful are those warm, sun-filled days of summer, and how wonderful are those sweet and flavorful fruits available throughout this season. Nearly everyone looks forward to savoring some special delicacy made from a summer fruit.

Even nature looks forward to those productive warm months, sometimes providing an over abundance of fruit from the orchards and back yard trees.

There's an economical way to save those fruity flavors of summer to enjoy year round—even when there's snow on the ground. That way is to preserve favorite fruits as jams or jellies.

And now, with an ever-growing consciousness about calories and sugar intake, there's a new way to make jams or jellies using less sugar, or no sugar at all.

This makes it possible to take advantage of bumper fruit crops, while taking into consideration the need to reduce the family's sugar intake.

Slim Set is a widely available product which allows home canners to prepare full-flavored jams and jellies without added sugar. With far fewer calories than conventional jams and jellies, which have 55% to 65% sugar, fruits preserved with this jelling mix are sweetened to taste with artificial sweetener, honey or even reduced amounts of sugar.

And, the best part is how easy Slim Set is to use. It also makes convenient smaller batches which single people, small families and senior citizens appreciate.

Here is a sample recipe for a variety of summer fruits. To receive additional information at no cost, write to Slim Set, MCP Foods, Inc., P.O. Box 3633, Anaheim, Calif. 92803.

JAMS: APRICOT, CHERRY, FIG, NECTARINE, PEACH, PEAR

Fruit	Amount of Fruit to Buy	Amount of Fruit Pulp to Use	Amount of Apple or White Grape Ju.	Sweetener	Slim Set	Yield
Apricot Cherry, Sweet	1 ½ lbs.	2 C	2 C	½ C sugar or ½ C sugar equivalent or ¼ C honey	1 pkg.	3½ C
Cherry, Sour	1 ½ lbs.	2 C	2 C	¾ C sugar or ¾ C sugar equivalent or ½ C honey	1 pkg.	3½ C
Fig Nectarine Peach Pear	1 lb. 1½ lbs. 1½ lbs. 1½ lbs.	2 C	2 C	½ C sugar or ½ C sugar equivalent or ¼ C honey	1 pkg.	3½ C

1. Prepare containers as directed in recipe folder enclosed in each package.
2. Wash fruit. For apricots and cherries; pit firm, ripe fruit. Do not peel. Grind finely in a food grinder. For figs; peel and grind figs in a food grinder. For nectarines and peaches; peel, pit and grind firm, ripe fruit. For pears; peel, core and grind firm, ripe fruit. When short of fruit pulp, add water or fruit juice to make 2 cups.
3. Sweeten pulp and juice according to your individual taste, or, follow guidelines in chart. Place in 3-4 quart pan or kettle. When short of juice, add water or other juice to make 4 cups.
4. Add 1 package Slim Set and stir vigorously to disperse. Use a potato masher or wire whip for easy mixing and stirring.
5. Place pan or kettle over high heat, bring to a boil and boil rapidly for 1 minute, stirring constantly.
6. Remove from heat. Skim foam. Immediately pour into glasses. Leave ½ inch space at top for paraffin seal or 1/8 inch space for 2 piece metal lid seal.

THE MINGLES MARKET

QUESTION: I have heard the term "mingles" used in connection with home buying.

I recently read in your excellent column that the proportion of single homebuyers is increasing. This is easy to understand. but the term "mingles" arouses my curiosity. Would you please explain what this means?

ANSWER: Across the country, unrelated buyers who are faced with rising home prices and high interest rates are joining together to share homes and condominiums. These unrelated individuals are often referred to as "mingles." One example is school teachers. In certain cities, they have joined together in purchasing town houses.

Changing lifestyles are making it easier for people of almost any age and gender to join together for homebuying. For many individuals, this may be the only way they can enjoy the benefits of home ownership.

In order to cater to this market, builders are creating condominiums with master bedrooms at each end of the unit. Some houses that cater to this market also include oversized kitchens and livingrooms. often there are additional amenities, such as jacuzzis, sunken entertainment areas, and swimming pools.

The real estate industry recognizes changing lifestyles and continues to cater to these needs through innovative design and concept.

Coming Attractions

By William Pacino

Cafe de la Paix

By WILLIAM PACINO

Did you miss COMING ATTRACTONS last week? The reason- the author was away on a visit to the Canadian cities of Montreal and Quebec.

I have returned with a thinner wallet and a memory of many a fine meal in these two delightful Quebec cities.

A point to remember: Despite all you have heard, the people of the province of Quebec are well acquainted with the English language and are willing to respond in English to your queestions. French is the official language of both Montreal and Quebec City, but if you at least know "bonjour" (hello) and "merci" (thank you), you have a good chance of getting around, eating and drinking well, and being able to talk with the people you meet.

I ask you to come along with me to a very nice restaurant I discovered in my travels to Quebec City. Specifically, I would like to recount to you a visit to the Cafe de la Paix, at 44 rue Desjardins.

At 9 PM, I announced our presence to the maitre'd at the Cafe de la Paix and waited a short while for a table to clear.

Finally, the maitre'd came over and motioned us to follow him to a most excellent seat. I say excellent because it was a large table setup for three people tucked in a corner. From this choice spot, we could watch everyone else in the restaurant and appreciate the lively atmosphere of the "Old City".

When we arrived the restaurant was hopping. Waiters were running in and out of the kitchen at high speed grabbing and shouting orders. The other diners were merrily talking and laughing in loud voices. The place was a cacophony of noise and excitement.

The maitre'd gave us a lot of personal attention, more than we had ever had in any other restaurant.

We started with Molson beer and white wine.

For appetizer, I chose crab cocktail and the person I was with favored Coquille St. Jacques.

For the main meal, my decision was the seafood plate - scallops, shrimp, one-half of a lobster, and king crab legs on a bed of rice. My friend chose Filet Mignon a la Piervingale, carrots, brussel sprouts and sliced potatoes. For dessert, black forest cake for me and blueberry shortcake for my friend were fine choices.

The meal was exciting. The restaurant was full of life and the meal and service could only be described in an Italian phrase "molto bene".

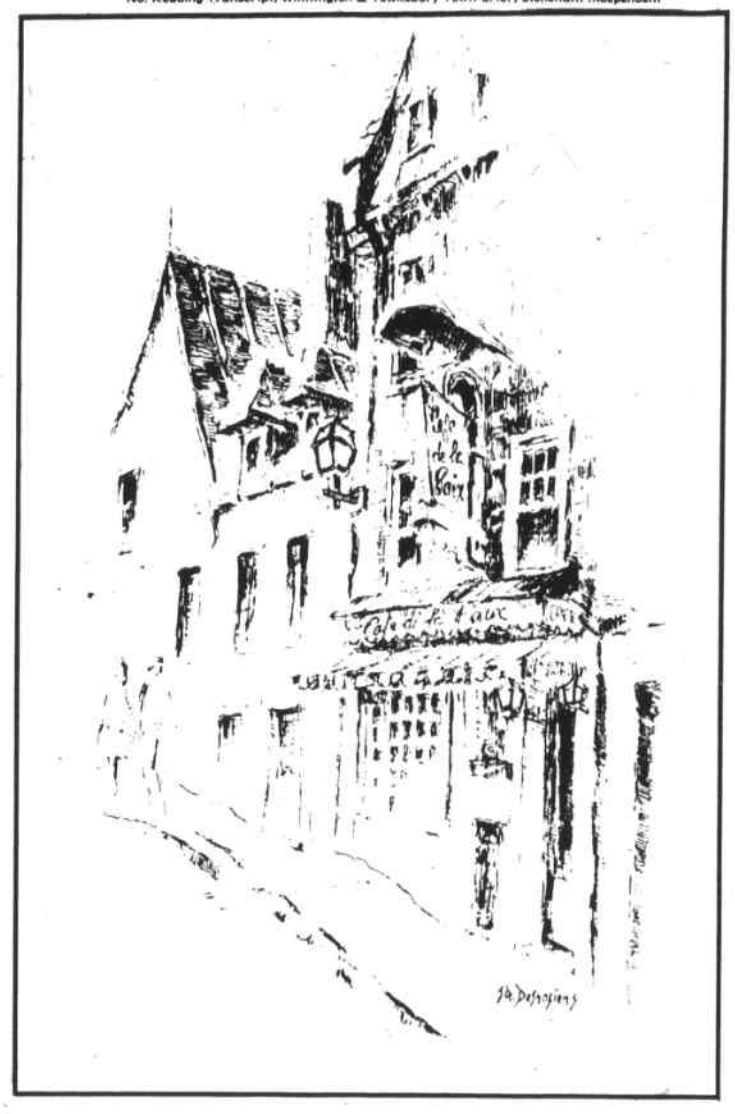

We dined for two hours, which is quite a different experience than the usual American practice of eat and run.

Finally, after a very satisfying meal in Old Quebec City, we left and got in the car parked right in front of the Cafe de la Paix.

La Ville de Quebec (City of Quebec) had left a $15.00 souvenir on my windshield - a parking ticket. Apparently one cannot park after 6 PM on the street we had chosen.

A problem arises however. Canada has a postal strike at the moment and all mail is restricted. In fact, on the parking ticket was an orange sticker "Ne pas mettre a la poste durent la greve des postiers" (Do not mail during the postal strike). In short, it is going to be very hard to pay for this parking ticket.

The Cafe de la Paix as well as the entire city of Quebec are highly recommended if the chance to fly, drive, or (something new from the Royal Viking Steamship Lines) sail to Quebec comes your way.

Yankee Homecoming

Newburyport, the smallest city in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, is ready to welcome visitors by the thousands to the 24th Annual Yankee Homecoming, July 25 to August 2.

The historic city's High Street lined with Federal Mansions vies with the Restoration area of Market Square and State Street to give all visitors a taste of fine crafts and antiques as well as delightful eating establishments.

On July 30th, nostalgia will reign with a Swing Era Big Band Dance where all will hear a nineteen-piece band with woman vocalist do justice to the standard classics of the Glenn Miller days.

Saturday, August 1st, will feature a Country Western Concert presenting Tina Welch and Nashville star Ruby Falls plus a surprise guest.

Sunday, August 2nd, the widely known Jimmy Fund Parade will bring the 24th Homecoming to a close. The Shriner's Marching Band, the First Marine's Band and a dozen more will set the beat for a galaxy of floats.

Newburyport can be reached off Route 95 or by boat from the sea or the Merrimack River.

Call the Yankee Homecoming Committee at 435-5038 for further information.

Dental plans popular

Dental insurance is maintaining its place as the fastest growing benefit in the national health care marketplace with 70 million Americans having some form of dental coverage, according to Dental Service of Massachusetts.

Dr. James M. Timmons, D.M.D., presiding at the dental insurer's annual June meeting, predicted that more than 100 million Americans will have some basic dental coverage by the mid-1980's.

Enrollment in Dental Service in Massachusetts, the state's largest dental insurer, rose to 570,000 in 1981, the corporation announced. The dental insurer added 55,000 new members in 1980 and gained an additional 217,000 members in the first half of 1981.

Dental Service members are enrolled through group employers. In 1980, 347 new groups were signed and in January 1981 Dental Service became the administrator of the Federal employee Dental Program offered to federal employees in Massachusetts.

About one-third of the three million persons in Massachusetts eligible for group dental coverage had some form of dental benefit plan in 1980. Dr. Timmons said. He anticipated that this coverage could double in the next four to five years.

Dr. Timmons noted that the expanding dental field would be marked by more intense competition among an increasing number of dentists. He pointed out that America is expected to have 156,000 dentists in 1990, a 50 percent increase in the number of dentists over the past 20 years.

Dental Service of Massachusetts has 3800 member dentists, or nearly 95 percent of the actively practicing dentists in the state. The number of member dentists is now at an all-time high, the dental insurer announced.

Comprehensive dental insurance programs for Massachustts are jointly administered by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts. Dental Service, which is affiliated with Delta Dental Plans Association, is the only non-profit public service corporation specializing in dental coverage in Massachusetts. The dental insurer is the sixth largest Delta Dental Plan in the United States and the largest in New England.
